Cellphone users not off the hook

STUDY A major international study into the link between cellphone use and two types of brain cancer has proved inconclusive, according to a report due to be published in a medical journal tomorrow.

A 10-year survey of almost 13,000 participants found most cellphone use didn't increase the risk of developing meningioma — a common and frequently benign tumour — or glioma — a rarer but deadlier form of cancer.

Longer call times appeared to pose a greater risk than the number of calls made, the study found. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Woman suing Rogers after affair discovered by hubby

A Toronto woman says the billing practices of Rogers Wireless Inc. led to her husband discovering her extramarital affair.

Now the woman, whose husband walked out, is suing the communications giant for $600,000 for alleged invasion of privacy and breach of contract, the results of which she says have ruined her life.

In 2007, Gabriella Nagy had a cellphone account with Rogers, which sent the monthly bill to her home address in her maiden name. Her husband was the account holder for the family's cable TV service at the same address and later added other services.

Rogers mailed a "global" invoice for all of its service-es to the matrimonial home that included an itemized bill for Nagy's cellular service, according to the statement of claim filed in Ontario Superior Court of Justice.

According to the statement of claim, which has not been proven in court, "The husband used the previously private and confidential information that the defendant unilaterally disclosed to the husband to inquire about the people that the plaintiff was telephoning and the nature of such calls."

The statement alleges Rogers "unilaterally terminated its cellular contract with the plaintiff that had been in her maiden name and included it in the husband's account that was under his surname."

Ombudsman search turns nasty

Province allegedly trying to discredit Marin as selection panel hits impasse

Andre Marin's days as Ontario's most outspoken government watchdog may be numbered.

An all-party committee tasked with deciding Marin's fate as ombudsman can't agree on who should get the job, prolonging a search that's sparked controversy from Day 1.

Meanwhile, reports are swirling that the government — eager to oust the confrontational Marin in favour of former Liberal MP Susan Whelan — have mounted a campaign to discredit him.

Liberals are apparently grumbling about Marin's expenses, including frequent travel to his Ottawa home and the extensive renovations made to his office when he switched to a new location in downtown Toronto.

Andre Marin

Added to the volatile mix are revelations of human-rights complaints against the ombudsman's office and an anonymous letter that points the finger at Marin for a toxic work environment.

Premier Dalton McGuinty insists he's not out to get Marin, noting that he's praised him in the past for his work.

But it was often a bitter pill to swallow. Marin's flair for attention-grabbing quotes often irked politicians and staffers whose files came under the ombudsman's microscope.

He openly feuded with former health minister David Caplan over public funding of the cancer drug Avastin, and the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corp. has yet to fully recover from Marin's scathing report on insider lottery wins.

When his contract wasn't renewed and the government opened up the job for competition, opposition critics accused McGuinty of trying to silence one of his most vocal critics.

Marin dismisses the allegations as "silly gossip," saying the move shaved $345,000 off his budget and his travel expenses are well within provincial rules.

Local soldier's body returns from Afghanistan

REPATRIATION It should have been a happier homecoming, but some troops returning home from Afghanistan yesterday were down a comrade.

The body of Pte. Kevin McKay, the latest soldier to die in Afghanistan, arrived at CFB Trenton aboard a military transport plane that was also carrying a contingent of about 100 troops returning from their deployment.

The strains of a bagpiper's soulful lament floated on the sunny afternoon air as McKay's mother wept at the sight of her son's coffin being lowered into a hearse.

McKay's father, a captain with the Toronto Fire Service, remained stoic while family members laid single red roses on his McKay was killed by a roadside bomb Thursday while on foot patrol southwest of Kandahar city. His first tour in Afghanistan was due to end this weekend.

The 24-year-old was with

Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean and Defence Minister Peter MacKay were among the dignitaries present at the repatriation ceremony.

He is the sixth member of the Canadian military to die in Afghanistan this year, and the 144th to die as part of the Afghan mission since it began in 2002.

Protesters hold a mock funeral for animals euthanized at a Newmarket shelter.

Protesters claim pets put down 'needlessly'

A moment of silence was held yesterday outside a Newmarket shelter for the animals euthanized by the OSPCA as a result of a ringworm outbreak.

But amidst the tears and despair was plenty of anger and outrage.

More than 100 protesters, many dressed in black, called for the resignation of the board of directors and urged York Regional Police to lay criminal charges against the organization for causing unnecessary suffering, pain and death to the animals under its care.

"We beg you to charge the executives under the Criminal Code of Canada for the senseless slaughter of these beautiful animals," Lesly Blank, a rally organizer and volunteer walker at the shelter, yelled through a megaphone at the police guarding the property on Woodbine Avenue.

"They killed those animals needlessly."

Blank said the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals didn't follow protocols.

"They failed to exercise reasonable care or supervision of animals in their custody," Blank told the gathering.

"If all of these animals had not been in their custody, then they would not have been exposed to ringworm infection that resulted in unnecessary pain, suffering and death."

Waiting around in the suburbs

InTransit

Ed
Drass

metronews.ca/intransit

Mississauga has finally stopped growing outwards, so it's time to grow up. The city has built out to its boundaries with mostly low-density, car-dependent housing and now the official strategy is to create a more transit-friendly environment, including a dense, highrise "downtown" near the Square One mall.

Thanks to tight budgets, Mississauga Transit (MT) has been expanding very modestly. Although riders can experience long waits between buses on some routes and overcrowding at certain times, overall the network is serving current needs, says MT director Geoff Marinoff. "I don't think there is a lot of (extra) pent-up demand."

Although buses can get so full they run "closed door" and bypass patrons at stops, Marinoff states these occurrences are often random and cannot be easily solved by just adding vehicles.

Regular MT user David Fisher points out that wait times of every 30 minutes or more (in some areas), as well as a reduced Sunday network, means many residents will keep using their cars.

Marinoff says non-forming routes have already been pruned as much as possible, so putting out more buses on weekends, nights or along certain corridors would require cutting service elsewhere.

The city has been able to launch a fledgling express bus grid but most lines run only in peak periods. Fisher says not only is MT's express service too skimpy, but vehicles often move too slowly. Marinoff replies times have been revised and this is being monitored more closely.

However, he adds, until transit priority measures are implemented, such as exclusive Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) lanes, an express bus is not a lot quicker than a local one.

"The challenge of a limited-stop express service,"

Marinoff says, "is that you're going as fast as the traffic and the lights allow, and the only thing you really save is you're not stopping (at every local stop)."

Mississauga's first BRT route along Highway 403 and Eglinton Avenue is set to open fully in 2012. Next on the list for higher-order transit is Hurontario Street.

Canadians want Jean to remain GG: Poll

Canadians still like having Michaëlle Jean as their de facto head of state, a new poll suggests.

With Stephen Harper preparing to replace the Haiti-born, fluently bilingual Jean as Governor General, almost half of Canadians asked say they would prefer it if the prime minister reappointed her to another five-year term.

The latest opinion sampling from Harris Decima for The Canadian Press finds that 58 per cent of respondents believe Jean has done either an excellent or good job as Governor General. Only five per cent think she has performed poorly.

Similarly, 47 per cent believe Harper should appoint her to another term, as opposed to 36 per cent who believe he should find someone new.

The results have not changed much from the last time Harris Decima asked the question in April, indicating that opinions about Jean are fairly entrenched.

Pollster Doug Anderson said Canadians likely don't spend a lot of time thinking about the performance of the viceregal, but what they know about Jean they have generally liked.

Still, he said it would be a mistake to say Canadians are clamouring for her reappointment.

"I don't think people have a very high expectation for that role," he said. "But for all the things that people know that she did, they feel she was probably doing her best and being a good person in that role."

The survey of 1,000 was conducted between May 6 and 9 and is considered accurate plus or minus 3.1 percentage points, 19 times out of 20.

Anderson found that how Canadians split on this question largely depended on whether they support Jean's reappointment, and whether they were Conservative or Liberal backers.

Jean's term officially ends on Sept. 27, but there is speculation the prime minister wants to install a new viceregal in time for the Queen's visit to Canada in July.

VATICAN More than 100,000 people filled St. Peter's Square yesterday in a major show of support for Pope Benedict XVI over the clerical sex abuse scandal.

Citing estimates from Vatican police, the Vatican press office said 150,000 people turned out for the demonstration organized by an association of 68 Italian lay groups.

Mile-long tube goes to work; oil may be spreading

GULF OF MEXICO In a significant step toward containing a massive Gulf oil leak, BP said a mile-long tube was funnelling crude yesterday from a blown well to a tanker ship after three days of wrestling to get the stop-gap measure into place on the seafloor.

Yet even as the company reported the success after weeks of fruitless efforts, scientists warned oil that has already spewed into the Gulf could have dire consequences for the environment.

Computer models show the black ooze may have already entered a major current flowing toward the Florida Keys, a researcher told the Associated Press yesterday.

The contraption used by BP was hooked up successfully and sucking oil from a pipe at the blown well yesterday afternoon after being hindered by several set-backs.

Engineers remotely guiding robot submersibles had worked since Friday to place the tube into a 21-inch pipe nearly a mile below the sea.

Greek crisis still a worry

Stock markets are in for more selling pressure this week and gold will likely get a further lift as investors focus on the huge price to be paid for dealing with the European debt crisis.

Fears the debt crisis will continue for months and years have got investors worried that a resulting slump in Europe — the world's biggest economy — will undermine the global recovery and weaken demand for everything from coal and minerals to grain, oil and machinery.

Those are the kinds of things Canada exports to the continent and other parts of the world, and there's fear the Canadian economy could take a hit. "European growth is going to struggle for probably years given the enormous task at hand," said Doug Porter, deputy chief economist at BMO Capital Markets.

Ash strikes again

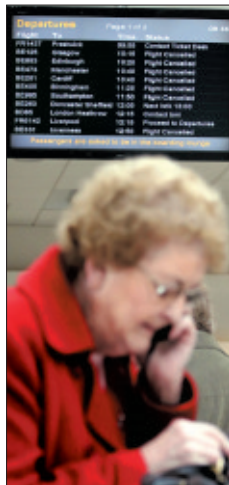

Airports in northern England, Ireland shut down

Airports in northern England, Scotland, Ireland and Northern Ireland were forced to close yesterday afternoon due to a dense cloud of volcanic ash drifting over from Iceland.

The shutdowns affected all airports in Northern Ireland, along with others in northern England — including the key cities of Manchester and Liverpool — as well as Prestwick in Scotland and other Scottish airports, Britain's National Air Traffic Service said.

Aviation authorities expected London's airports — including Heathrow, Europe's busiest — to remain open until at least 1 a.m. today (7 p.m. ET yesterday). But airports in Birmingham, about 175 kilometres northwest of London, and Norwich, on England's east coast, were to close early yesterday evening.

The British air traffic agency said the ash cloud

was changing shape and moving south, toward Oxford, England, 100 kilometres northwest of London. Britain's weather service says the northwest winds should shift midweek, redirecting the ash away from Britain.

German authorities sent up two test flights yesterday to measure the ash cloud, one from the German Aerospace Center (DLR) and the other from Lufthansa, the country's biggest airline.

Ash can clog jet engines. The April 14 eruption at Iceland's Eyjafjallajökull volcano forced most countries in northern Europe to shut their airspace between April 15-20, grounding more than 100,000 flights and an estimated 10 million travellers worldwide. The shutdown cost airlines more than $2 billion.

In southern Iceland, activity at the volcano fluctuated yesterday but did not get more intense, civil protection official Agust Gunnar Gylfason said. He blamed the closures on shifting winds.

Going solar made simple

Price of panels dropping as use becoming more widespread

BEN KNIGHT
For Metro Canada

Electricity bills are rising. Power use is an eternal issue. Maybe you're curious about solar power, but think converting your house is too big — and too expensive — a job.

Not so, says Michael Boxwell, author of The Solar Electricity Handbook.

"The best way is to start small, and build up," Boxwell says. "I've got a house that gets very little direct sunlight. So putting a solar panel system in, that costs tens of thousands of dollars, would be crazy. But putting in enough solar power just to run the lighting in the house: that's easy. Get started with something like that. And if you like it, you can put more panels in and power more things."

The actual cost can be surprisingly low.

"I spent about $150-$200, and I've got a basic system. I'm doing a little bit to reduce my carbon footprint, and in case there's a power failure, I've still got lights on."

Not only will every solar panel reduce your energy bill and footprint, Boxwell says the very act of generating your own power greatly increases your green awareness, as well.

"When you generate your own power, your much more aware of what you're using. You become aware that your television

Tips and info

• More tips and info at solarelectricityhandbook.com and your computer are taking power if they are left on. You start becoming a lot more energy-conscious if you've got a couple of solar panels on the roof."

And if you want to go entirely solar — get your house off the electrical grid completely — it's not as difficult as you think.

"It's not a big job," Boxwell says, reassuringly. "If you're comfortable with do-it-yourself and electrics, you could probably do it in two or three days. But you do need a house where you've got a clear view of the sun year-round. You need a south-facing roof or other surface where you can put a large number of panels."

Perhaps the best news? The price of solar technology is plummeting.

"The glass they use for the solar panels is the same glass they use for flat-screen TVs. Because those have become widespread in the past few years, the cost of actually manufacturing this glass comes right down. They're even now able to make solar panels by printing silicon onto sheets of plastic. It's going to be so cheap you'll have solar panels on the back of cell phones, so they self-charge."

As the technology becomes more available the price is dropping.

MLB RESULTSRangers 2 Blue Jays 5

They only got three hits, but the Toronto Blue Jays were happy to take quality over quantity yesterday against the Texas Rangers.

One of those hits, a fourth-inning double by John Buck, proved to be the difference as the Blue Jays beat the Rangers 5-2, giving them a three-game sweep and their fourth win in a row.

Buck's bases-loaded double to centre on a 3-2 fastball from Rangers starter Colby Lewis (3-2) scored all three runners and was reviewed by the umpires to determine if it actually had been a grand slam.

Buck is on an eight-game hit streak (11-for-25) with three homers and nine RBIs during that span.

Most of our images of what a hypnotist does come from bad TV — but in the right hands, this technique is not about making people “very sleepy” so they can squawk like chickens.

For Edmonton social worker Terri Cooper, it's a powerful but simple technique that helps people change things in their lives.

Cooper, now 43, was always a natural at counselling others. “I was one of those teenagers that everyone brought their problems to.” She studied social work at the Edmonton campus of the University of Alberta.

For more than a decade, she worked with families in crisis. It was difficult work, especially since few wanted her advice. “It's hard to work with people who don't really want to see you.”

Cooper wanted to help people in a more empowering way. While she was flipping through the want ads six years ago, she saw an advertisement for a two-day course on hypnosis.

The basics she learned showed her the technique had a lot of potential — and made her realize she needed to learn more. So Cooper began taking more courses in hypnosis and a psychotherapy technique called neuro-linguistic programming.

Cooper then quit her job and opened a private practice, offering hypnotherapy and social work counselling.

Most clients come to her with a short-term goal of ous mental health issue.

At the first session, Cooper tries to get her patients to talk about what they want. She gives them homework, asking them to put these plans into writing.

Session two involves actual hypnosis. To induce the relaxed but aware state, she varies her technique, depending on the person. Some don't like to close their eyes, so she uses what's called a waking hypnosis. Many find fixed eye induction works best: They stare at something for a long time, listen to Cooper's voice, and count backwards.

Once hypnotized, Cooper incorporates the words her client has given her to suggest a change in behaviour. She often makes CDs of her suggestions so clients can use it later at home. She al-

One-third of companies fear losing top talent

As the recession eases and companies begin to add to strained staffs, employers are also taking action to retain existing top talent at their organizations.

According to a new CareerBuilder survey, nearly one-third (32 per cent) of employers are concerned about losing their high performing workers in the second quarter, while one-third (33 per cent) of workers said it is likely they will start looking for a new job when the economy picks up. As a result, employers are turning to a variety of different retention strategies to hold onto those workers and their valuable intellectual capital.

Increased workloads, longer hours and fewer resources related to the recession may be contributing to higher job dissatisfaction. Looking at key factors that influence job satisfaction and company loyalty, workers reported the following:

- Pay: Nearly one-third (32 per cent) of workers said they are dissatisfied with their pay, up from 29 per cent during the same period last year.

- Work-life balance: Nearly one-quarter (22 per cent) of workers said they are dissatisfied or very dissatisfied with their work-life balance.

- Career Progress: Twenty-seven per cent of workers are dissatisfied with the career advancement opportunities provided by their current employers.

Of workers who have their sights set on making a career move, they shared the attributes they will be primarily looking for in a new employer in addition to competitive pay and benefits. Good career advancement opportunities (60 per cent) and good work culture (57 per cent) topped the list. Others include:

- Less stressful work environment (45 per cent)

- Sense of ownership in their position, that they can make a difference (42 per cent)

"Many employers were forced to make unpopular, though necessary decisions during the recession in terms of adjustments in headcount, pay and overall strategy," said Jason Ferrara, vice-president of corporate marketing for CareerBuilder. "As the economy improves and resources are reinstated, companies are employing different ways to repair and enhance the employee experience and strengthen morale."

CANADIANS VALUE HIGHER EDUCATION, POLL FINDS According to a new poll, nearly eight in 10 Canadians think a post-secondary education is more important than ever. The poll also shows that most people think tuition fees should be frozen or lowered, while over 50 per cent of respondents said governments should spend more on higher education even if it means paying more income taxes.

Single people, only children a recipe for workplace strife

TOMAS LUNDIN
Metro World News

If you want to avoid conflict at work don't put a single person next to an only child. A new study shows these groups are most prone to annoy each other.

Dr. Andrejs Ozolins, senior lecturer at the department of psychology at Växjö University in Sweden, has studied how

"If you have siblings you soon learn that you can't always get the biggest piece of the cake every time."

Dr. Andrejs Ozolins

people get into workplace conflicts depending on relationship status and birth order.

Of the 300 people studied, two groups stood out when it came to conflicts — single people and only children.

"It is like a ladder with youngest children at the bottom and single only children at the top," Ozolins said. "One reason sums it up: Relationships. If you have siblings, you soon learn that you can't always get the biggest piece of the cake every time."

According to Ozolins this is an important lesson for the workplace that only children miss out on.

He adds that single people appear to be more prone to conflict because they often don't have anyone to discuss everyday problems and thoughts with.

But a good friend can fill that role for a sociable single person. Ozolins says: "The behaviour is above all explained by being lonely, and more single people are lonely. 'One of the worst punishments man has come up with is ostracizing, to be excluded.'"

He hopes the study will show the importance of relationships both at work and outside work.

City says no to Sex

Carrie & co may be too racy for Gulf locale

Troubled relationships are nothing new for Sex and the City story lines. But this one takes it to a different level: a possible snub from the Gulf city that plays the exotic backdrop for the movie sequel.

Less than two weeks before the release of Sex and the City 2, it's unclear whether the film will be shown in oil-rich Abu Dhabi — the scripted setting where Carrie and her chic New York posse swap their Jimmy Choos for sandals and kick some sand at Middle Eastern traditions.

It's already been a rocky rapport. Emirates' officials turned down a request to film on location, forcing the crew to head to Morocco and recreate the Abu Dhabi setting. In 2008, the original Sex and the City film was not shown in the United Arab Emirates, where censors routinely remove scenes such as kissing, nudity and expletives from movies and television shows.

And Shooting Stars, the UAE representatives for distributor Warner Bros., said Emirates officials have still not made a decision about bringing the film to cinemas in the Gulf state after its May 27 release date.

The film exposes some of the complexities for Gulf

The UAE's refusal to participate in the film reflects a desire to "control their brand," said Leila Hudson, graduate director of Near Eastern studies at the University of Arizona.

The day of zero followers

Socialite

Rea McNamara

metronews.ca/socialite

Last Monday morning, Twitter users were outraged by its latest outage. Everyone — from your mom to Ashton Kutcher — had zero followers.

The micro-blogging service's following/follower popularity-o-meter had been wiped, and you can bet your 140 characters that calamity ensued. Hackers were blamed, capped red alerts were issued. The great real-time searchable hierarchy was disrupted.

"Today ordinary tweeps can feel as cool as Ashton Kutcher: everyone is equal with zero followers," sagely tweeted tech skeptic Evgeny Morozov, ForeignPolicy.com's Net Effect blogger. "Hail Twitter Socialism!"

Yet the Twitter socialite movement wasn't meant to be. The site issued a report stating that the zero follower/following had been set to resolve a bug that allowed any user to "force" follow other users — like your mom or Ashton Kutcher — by tweeting "accept @username".

The loophole was discovered by Turkish teen Bora Kirca, who was misidentified as the #Twitterhack when popular tech blog Gizmodo broke the story.

"Such an accident led to a big chaos," said Kirca to the New York Daily News. "I want to apologize for all Twitter users, I didn't intend to harm anyone."

Did Kirca truly harm anyone? Obviously not, but he did reveal the value we place on our follower/following. No longer are you following "friends", more often than not, you're celebrities, newfeeds, or even zodiac facts.

Strangely enough, the most sense I've gotten of Twitter's changed usage has been by observing the experiences of two friends who just joined. One is writer, someone who signed up purely for professional reasons — to stay connected with other writers, to build his readership — and likens Twitter to being "a live business card."

The other friend is a part-time student giving social networking another go. He approaches Twitter as a "customized stream of information," and has already unfollowed users who "tweet insignificant things like having computer problems or complaining that the plumbing in their building isn't working."

"These insignificant things don't interest me, especially if I don't know that person personally."

As Twitter expands and has its outages, it's usefulness changes. No longer is it a means of connecting with friends, but a personal broadcast medium. While the following/follower hierarchy remains, at the very least, we — including your mom or Ashton Kutcher — run and own these channels. While we can't force anyone to follow us anymore, we can be arbitrary in who we follow.

Law & Order cancelled

The venerable police-courtroom drama Law & Order has been axed.

NBC announced Friday that the show would end its historic 20-season run on May 24, with a season finale that was never meant to bring the saga to a close.

The show starred an ensemble cast currently consisting of Jeremy Sisto, Anthony Anderson, Linus Roache, Alana De La Garza, Sam Waterston and S. Epatha Merkerson, who, unrelated to the show's abrupt cancellation, had already announced she was moving on.

Even as it issued a death sentence for the original Law & Order, NBC announced a new drama in the Law & Order franchise called LOLA (Law & Order: Los Angeles). Premiering this fall, LOLA is described as a procedural crime drama.

Law & Order will end its historic 20-season run on May 24.

ma "that will follow the theme and storylines similar to the Law & Order-brand series on the streets of Los Angeles." Casting for the show is under way, the network said.

NBC also will renew Law & Order: Special Victims Unit for a 12th season.

The sudden end of Law & Order could be explained by sagging ratings and creative fatigue, but its renewal had been widely expected nonetheless. Then, on Thursday, a flurry of reports declared the series to be doomed. NBC refused to confirm the reports. Negotiations were said to be continuing late Thursday.

Jeff Gaspin, chairman of NBC Universal Television, praised Law & Order creator-producer Dick Wolf and said it "will continue to make an impact like no other series before."

Lidell sets new course

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

For Jamie Lidell, success has had its advantages.

He's been able to tour the world and got Beck to help him produce parts of his new record, but life has been far from perfect since he released his critically acclaimed soul records Multiply and Jim. "I lost control of my career," he says.

Management, he explains, got too involved, making him feel like someone else was running his life. "I allowed them to have too much power and at that point I didn't feel like I was the boss anymore."

He fired his team and started over. He moved from Berlin to New York and put his tour manager — who also happens to be Feist's manager — in charge.

"It's about not saying yes to everything," he explains. "And I'm in a much better place. Plus my new manager is a champ."

The turmoil is one reason why his new record, Compass, takes a harder, more electronic edge than his past releases. Lidell actually started out making abstract electronica, but shifted to classic soul on 2005's Multiply. The new album combines the two — the title track has a classic R&B vocal melody, but enough strange drumbeats and atmospheric keyboard noises to make this sound more like a mash-up than a fully formed song.

Beck's involvement is another reason for the edgier sound. When Lidell sat down with the singer-songwriter in L.A. for the first time, he realized his material wasn't strong enough. "I was a bit overwhelmed and out of my depth," admits Lidell.

He went back to New York, holed himself up in his apartment and thought long and hard about what he wanted the album to sound like.

"I had a month of intensive soul searching and then just went at the songwriting process flat out," he says. "I ended up coming up with so much material. I never knew I had it in me."

Discovering that he could be a songwriting machine, though, also made him realize that he couldn't work with Beck. While Beck wanted to collaborate on songs, Lidell was looking for a producer to craft material that was already written. "I told him, 'Hey it's been great, but I think I need to work on these songs myself.'"

In the end, Lidell recorded most of his record in rural Ontario — at Feist's cabin. He brought members from Zeus and Grizzly Bear to play on the disc (Feist also sings on some tracks) which may be another reason for his musical evolution. "It was such a contrast from working in L.A. ... And that gave the album the really strange contour."

Jolie & Depp egos clash

WHO'S THE BIGGER DIVA? Work relations between Angelina Jolie and Johnny Depp reportedly have been souring on the set of their next movie, The Tourist, according to In Touch.

"She's getting fed up with Johnny," a source says. "Their chemistry was supposed to fly off the charts, but in private, they're not getting along. She was disappointed that he didn't get in better shape for the role and that he didn't want to cut his hair."

And while Jolie has reportedly been complaining about Depp's tardiness and appearance, Depp has reportedly been getting fed up with Jolie as well, calling her a "prima donna" and avoiding her. "Johnny retreats to his own trailer until he's called out again," a source says. "He thinks she's really full of herself."

Beiber avoids Miley questions on Ellen

BEIBER ASSURES US HE'S PLAYING THE FIELD Justin Bieber's no one woman guy, but that probably doesn't bother Miley Cyrus.

People.com reports the tween sensation wiggled his way out of answering questions about dating Cyrus during a recent taping of The Ellen DeGeneres Show. "I'm dating around, hanging out with girls but not really dating," Bieber says.

"Like hanging around with Miley Cyrus?" asks Ellen as she shows a picture of the two singers walking side-by-side. A smiling and seemingly blushing Bieber quickly responds, "just like hanging around with people."

Bieber and Cyrus were snapped last week having dinner in West Hollywood, but the 16-year-old tried to convince that other girls are in the picture. "If you look on the Internet you'll see other girls that I hang out with," he says.

Later in the interview, set to air today, DeGeneres lets Bieber talk about what he's becoming best known for besides making teenage girls swoon — his hair.

Bieber says it takes him just minutes to put together his signature look. "Like, five minutes. Like, seriously. People are always like, 'yeah, right.' I get out of the shower I blow dry it and then it's done in like, five minutes," he says.

Looking for balance

CAREER SUCCESS DOESN'T MEAN MARRIAGE SUCCESS Ryan Reynolds and Scarlett Johansson reportedly can't find a balance between their successful careers, and it could mean their marriage, according to the National Enquirer.

"Nothing is going to change unless Scarlett and Ryan can learn to compromise — and they won't. Scarlett won't cancel anything she has coming up or wants to go to, and neither will Ryan," a source says.

"They're struggling to see eye-to-eye on almost anything. From when to start a family — he's ready, but she isn't — to her smoking and what she sees as his reckless motorcycle riding. What's making matters worse is that their busy careers are keeping them apart, so they get really out of sync. It's gotten so bad that neither of them is hurrying home just to start fighting again."

LaBeouf admits some mistakes

"When I saw the second movie, I wasn't impressed with what we did," LaBeouf says, according to Page Six.

"There were some really wild stunts in it, but the heart was gone." The actor, who is in Cannes promoting Wall Street 2: Money Never Sleeps, promises the third Transformers film "restores the human element that got lost in the second movie."
